WASHINGTON LETTER.

Mrs Kate Chase Eprague's Visit to the Scenes of her Former Eway.

A Gessipy Obspiter on the Sammer Cirls of Wash ington-How they Dress and How they

Byech Correspond are of the quadar Orago in Washing to July 30.—It is difficult to fir for the last days of a congressional season. The scane changes almost hourly, and one changed on predict at a given hour what will occur at the following hour. There is a continued struggle for precedence of measures. The average congressional a now a momently. The bit do is a battle of glants, and weak legislators gust so to the wall. In the upper branch of congress where the number of members is not paratically small, what is termed seauctorial conterprise of a hyperspecied to give a young a maintifunded seator an opportunity to secure or publishmential senator an opportunity to secure or published in a center that is as compare ively dear to him as his own heart, but in the lower branch of congress this is almost beyond ques tradiction to the resonant terms are cord to mike, and personal friendships are not a lowest to said in the pass of legislative results. Lespacially declaring of committees know and feel that a responsibility restaupon them, and bowers distry may have been their more the greatern months, they real nepts during the proceeding months, they real ze it is political life or death to them if they do not now busile on the sword of aggressive war-fare and make a dashing tharge or a flank movement to achieve a victory So far results have been about us usual. Rep-

So far results have been about as usual. Representative who have failed to secure consideration of their measures have entagented measures champleded by brother representatives who were seccessful to the struggle for precedency Each setting san has therefore recorded that a great deal has been said, little accomplished. Under the old rules, during the last six days of a session mambers were given the privilege, ander certain conditions, of calling up favorumessures and securing consideration thereon. The same holds good under the rules adopted at the beginning of this session, but the trouble sengress will probably not indicate when it will close the session until within twenty-four fourter the time. Few local measures will therefore pess this body.

THE N P FORFRITURE BILL. The overwhelming vote by which was carried n the house of ropresentatives the house sub-situle for the bil forfeiting the Northern Pacific land grant, doubtless caused surprise to persons onacquainted with reasons for the vote As amended by corrections made the following merging the vote stood, year 187, nays 47, on the proposition to forfest all lands coterminous

As anseded by corrections made the following porsing the vote stood, year 187, nays 47, or the proposition to forest all lands coterminous with the line of the road weet of Rismarck. A number of members, among them Mr. Hermann, voted in favor of this radical substitute in order that the bill might be brought before a conference or minites. It was positively known that the senute would never agree to this substitute. If therefore the substitute had been voted down in the house, all prospects of a bill becoming a law this session would have been destroyed. Again the knowledge that the senate would not do more than forfeit the grant from Wallain to Portland and the wiscompleted part of the Casrade branch afforded many winvering members an opportunity to put themselves on a record that would please their constituents. No one will deap the sea at anythemospoist. Members who have not a question of a doubt that congress cannot legally declare a forfeiture of lands or ferminous with the completed line of the rand voted loudy for just the proposition.

The fortesters ball is not unlike the oleomargaries bill. When the latter was under crossistant be this as fraud, and repeated the world, but when a very exact that the bill sea fraud, and repeated the world, but when a very sea that the bill sea fraud, and repeated the world, but when a very sea the proposition of forfeiting all lands west of Bananck as boing the greatest humbs, of the age, ret when their names were railed they take direct for what they had demounced. The search of the proposition of forfeiting all lands west of Bananck as boing the greatest humbs, of the age, ret when their names were railed they take direct for what they had demounced. The same and the congress comes are correcting all lands west of Bananck as boing the greatest humbs, of the age, ret when their nontre to each other. It is proposition of forfeiting all lands west of Bananck as hong they greated the world, the representant represents and a significant of the lands of the formal and the

When the committee in charge of the bill at itself called it up for consideration they curtailed the time as much as they were able in order to present these who favored the senate measure from excession that yourse. A number of present these who fracted the senate measure from expressing their views. A number of nembers who were anxious to speak on the measure were not given an opportunity to speak neither were they given the sust leave to prior their remarks. Air Hermann had carefully prepared a speech but time was not granted him to driver it and it was with difficulty that he secured leave to prior.

A CHAPTER ON DIRES The audiences in attendance at the night sections that we held during the last days of congress differ somewhat from those in attend ance at a day session. A night session is the summer girl's earthly heaver. And summer gibts in washington are proportiously as numerous as hones bees about a single tower, and to many people every hit as sweet. During Joly, August and September there is not a boostly girl in the city—provided you keep at a respectful desance when you look at her A bundle of womanhood that cannot appear in a white dress is not worth noticing. L. H. Wheeler, of Portland, was on June in applinited to a clerkship in the treasury department. The appointment is under livil service rules, Mr. Wheeler having passed an examination of on after he came here last whose H-was assigned to the second auditors office, his work for the most part being the examination of clain s for bounty.

A. S. Bash, of Port Townsend, leaves for his home to-morrow. His principal blusiness east was to aid Chinese who had suffered losses in the outrages at easilie and other points in securing indemnity from the government. It was at last ascertained that nothing in this line could be accomplished this seesion. The claims must firt be filled with and examined by the Chinese efficiels at San Francisch, then be transmitted to the Chinese minister here, by him to the secretary of state, and by the latter officer to congress Mr. Bash he had several interviews with the Chinese minister here, by him to the secretary of state, and by the latter officer to congress Mr. Bash he had several interviews with the Chinese minister. Chine hen Woon is inclined to make haste slowly. He says that he deeply feats the wrong done to his county men and he shall of course ask the 1 out of States for a remuturesment of all losses. In precenting claims, however, he wants time to fully examine them in order to see that they are regular in every partendar and for amounts that are equitable. The claims will probably be ready by the next essent for present ution in the form of an indemnity bill.

A NEW HAT BY MACKAIR

M. Steele Mackaye has written what consider a very remarkable play

I blink I am cultilled to ear this, for I have never said it before. His plays up to the time have been anything but remarkable. I always thought be had it in him, but it did not appear to me that it came out in "Marriage," or "Rose Mirbut" or "Marriage," Mirbel," or "Hazel hirke" or "Dakolah "

He has now seized upon a sliring contemporaneous theme and handled it, I think, with ex tracromary power and originality. His aubject I heard the play read on Monday to a select

I heard the play read on Monday to a select company of actors and managers.

Mr blackaye is noted among these prople as a lo, reader. When an author has a pl y be wantate work off on a manager he availy remarks with a sigh of regret, "If I could only get Machaye to read it for me"

Ma kaye s method is the tumultuous one—He reads a play as Light is said to play the years.

reads a play as Liszt is said to play the p and the Talmages a play all to plees, acts every part, reans a play as Liszt is said to pia; the p and fee Talmages a pia; all to pleese, acts every part, shifts all the scopes, tears his hair, plucks at his eyes, and, streaming with gore and purspiration, aweeps his histeness into agonized acceptance by the torrent of his own belief.

At u see I am not inclined to & Mr Maccape off easily. I have heard him read plays before it am bound to say that they did not not so well as they read. So I was cautious this time and was he was be andended bith and tied him in the thair. Mr Tom Mctionou, ho would not come unless be accepted these conditions. If the got to say now that I believe he has made a play it at will make a feduric for somethed, for he has put into clear, unmatable, elequent action the opposing factors in the crodern such a system, and shown with terrible strength the true character of the monster that calls fixed Amarthy.

This recrutantly a fixe theme with the world just to w. And the man who gots the material if uh before the eyes of the public and taler reas, will hold their attention and win their mone.

Mr Mackaye has attempted to do this, and irese, will hold their attention and win their mone.

Mr. Mackaje has attempted to do this, and it thus successfully. The play draws a clean inceletation between the rotsm and fapartitism. It deals with the fiercest moments of revolution had it hangs the tritle incidents upon a noble, clean and at mit the love story. If I were an actor I would like to play the hero of this drama.

Mr. Tom McDonough said when it was ever that d. Lineary or Samon noter made a stronger or not ler play.

The left nothing whatever for me to say of course there are half a sorre of people want t.

If I were Mackays I would go slow, for it are is a birger fortune in a good play than there is in Will effect.

Livaco As A BESORT

Livaco, Aug 6, 1886 — Presuming it to be a matter of interest to the many readers of The Ore Consists who have friends and relatives at the beach to hear something of that locality. I will endeavor to gather into anaper my impressions during a somewha extended sojourn at North Heach.

The landing has been materially improved by the addition of a section of substantially constructed planking, for passengers and treight, placed on piling of sufficient strength to moor the burge of panking, for passengers and treight, placed on piling of sufficient strength to moor the burge of jumplan. Steamer day is generally observed by a trip to the wharf to see who is coming. Somewhody's girl, bean, father, mother, eister or brother is sure to come, and the osculistory greetings are on the most liberal and design of a calculative scale, as though an ocean of waters, and a cycle of time, had divided the kisser and the kissee.

The town of liwaco still presents about the same ag rearrance as it did two or three years ago, with the marked exception of greater taste and care in the painting und outside decoration of a number of the houses, the road to the in ach is a credit to the fewn, county and territry, and is worthy of I inition by the county of Mulinomali road board and supervisors—showing what a few people, with limited means properly directed, have been able to accomplish forward remodeled, added to and otherwise improved. Air Brady has built an addition to his cottage, on the front. An agency for The Original has been established at liwaco, so that visitors and summer residents on the beach can have their paper promptly delivered on making application to the agent. A SHOIGU CIVILIZATION.

Among the recent publications of the East in pres is a memoir of Judge Held, a prin - pept and upright citizen of Kentucky, who is tally besten. Recouse Judgo Read did not avenge b need in the neural Southern way, by putsuing his assailant with a shotenn, he was pursuing his assainant with a shiggin, he was ridiculed as a coward, and during his convass for an important judge-ship was so moreliesdly pursued with this fabro accusation that he com-nilted suincide. It is nother the stories of the kind that make river he distinction between the divingation of the North and the South | La credulity is easy when stories are unpleasant. lous when grow reports of Southern outrage-we a recited as arguments for legal reduces of prosent crimes and restraint again 1 violence for t a fature 'I don't believe it, ' used to be th answer of humans and conscientions democrat-who took refuge in obstinute increduity con-cerning the results of wrong a that a little reli-tion should have eath fight them belonged to t everyda) proballi the of Southern civilization. What would we think of the good sense of a mai mence, which has also the power of aw theating in the mind of an ontsiderchie perception of the brain in molecular motion. It is the minister, we intelligent the six the minister, we intelligent brain.

Mind manufests should to unonly in organization the can its its post on before his telescope rereads it to his sight of some insteads the re-reads it to his sight. So there are certain out-rages so inseparable from the stirit of South ero civilization, that no thoughtful man would deput a their reality any more than he would than of sten ingile essential immorality and when anity of human slavery until he had per-nully suffected its presumptive horrors to the test of judic al investigation Every could not be slavery without investigation that as human nature is constituted there could not be slavery without chronic. cruelly and minorality Non might as well by to conceive of water without hamidity as slavery without tohumanity, so that while "Lpcle Toni's Cabin" and the statistics of its key may have lashed some dead consciences into activity, no same thinker read in the nan. thing of delated excelly that he did not know before He knew it not because he had seen it, but because under any system of slavery crue to the concomitant, the logically credit e come quence of the civilization of which slavery was queice of the civilization of which sharery was heal the sign. Now, apolying this reasoning to the South, there is nothing locredible in the scory of political outrage that has been charged to its doors for twenty jears. Granting the stim dailing motive, what is there in these methods it a, is new or strange at the South or inconsist-ent with its history and notorious public centment for fifty years. The social civilization of the South among the best class of ruling whites, as shown by the story of Judge Reit, is trutal and ferocious on some subjects to the last degree of barbarism. Beld was a man of o Decience, of moral lefinement, who deeply felt the dignity and responsibility of his judicia position, he was brutally beaten by an attletic but 5 so completely his physical superior that the assault was an act of cowardics on the part f his foe Reid endured his hunditation hero ically, because he was a devout Caristian, who be sered he had no moral right to murder the man who had abused him, and because he believed that as a pudge be had no moral right to trainple under for the law of which he was the sworn errors and idministrator. His fellow charch near hers shuoned h.m., the press insuited nim and because of his presumed polaroonery he breame an object of social odlum, atmost an utcost, and in his despite and grief and humili-alen this high souled, sensitive man, who had on nuch moral serse to murder the roffi in who had benten blm, finally turned on himself the pixel be refused to use against his assailant. Of cruse a community where such things are could be when the people are so lawless that the related the of cruminal shoot the judge dead on helbench, is was done once in Breachit companies, where the court requires a military escort as in Rowan county, Keutucky, in other to approach the things like the account of the court of the nder to enforce anything like respect for law and justice, would not he-thate to carry an elec-tion of consequence by violence. The bolsterand usince, would not be that to carry an elec-tion of consequence by violence. The bolster-one, passionate, inhuman civilization that was suchied on slavery to-day pallutes murder as "a street encounter" and has no popular word of rebuke for scenes of blood among their best clarses that would be viewed with horror at the both. The violation of law with impunity is a very deal of dimoralization francy community, and one of the very worst signs of interior civil ranten at the South is the open sympathy which the common peop a have with smugglers and their distillers, the moonshiners of Kentucky, Ternessee, teorgia, North and South Carolina, and the frequency with which the mob hangpersons accused of crune, often torturny the n with fiendish malignity. Truly slavery's pot a ned milk nuitured a brotal child. In the South since the war juries have generally falled to create in face of the clearest evidence, we are the accused was a "meanwhile," who had shot a resence officer, a Ku Klux who hat both a resence officer, a Ku Klux who hat but hered a black voter, or even a Southern white democrat, like Col Cash of South Conna, who murdered his political and personal flend blumoun in a duel several years ago. And yet if we botther in mountaineers who do bees damust is things, who paralyze the ma-

They are very ignorant very superest one, very lary but brace, trainful, poor, how they retrous and hopetable. When the very top of the outsi at the fractional classes at the S anti, men of excellent family and reputation murder one at other on trivial pros cation, nobody need he theredulous concerning the authenticity of no ilical outrages. It is fare to assume that a white n un, who will shoot his neighbor on sight, no anather of solid and local ou ton, when offended, would not hesitate to inak; a holgun canvase among the blacks in order to siend a state. The story of Judge Reid file-trates the awful distance between the capacity of Southern civilization for crimes of violence and the aversica of our own section to arbitra-tion by the piste. The Southern people are, as a ru e, an annable, hospitable, brave and h m est ince, but shavery has left behind a horri-julia centiment which makes any act of mur-der or violence credible for which there is any public or private motive all organized resistance had ceased, and the whole region apparently was at the mercy of the invaders.

As these lacts became clear, Burion and Angue decided that it was their duty to remain at the house, and by ceaseless vigitance either to best off a small number of mauranders, or, if outnumbered, to take the family to a place of shelter and concealment in the woods. Burton rode over to his plantation and put the place in rodarge of a trusty overseer, first sending his aunt to a safe refuge farther north. He also brought far Angus a heavy fowling piece, which, leaded with buckshound at short range, which is quite as effective as the ritle he had lest. The hundsome pixels and sword which had belonged to the British ensign were much admired and a good supply of annumition was prepared for the former. One of the plateis was given to Ella, who was making good the brave words she had epoken at the buginaing of our ctory. She caught the high, sangutate spirit of her lever, and it would be difficult to say which followed or enjoyed more from exacting and the same and admires behavior of her lover and brother. The first paralyzing effect of fear soon passed from the community and the people began to understand the condition under which they must live if the British army remained at Charlotte. If they would go to the village and give their allegance to the royal officers they would be namolested and money would be paid for the provisions they furnished. If they held aloof or ware hostite, they would be secure from no wrong or vaturage. Yet the great majority of the men not only refused to have dealings with the British, but even began to fire on the foraging parties had were sent out daily. The partisans would have pursued openly, but George checked them, knowling that this course would reveal the smallness of their numbers.

"Follow me," he cried, "B; making a short circuit we can come upon them about a mile from here in a piece of woods and then will have more or less cover all the way to town. If they see how few we are they" give us the chase, and Pye had enough of such chasing. He seemed to be the natural leader, and they all followed. In doing so they caught up with another bandof partisans, in which were the owner of the piace and his two sons, all burning to avenge the wrongs which they had thus far helplessly withcesed. Away they went, like the wind, down a wood road, until at last they were in advanced of the foraging party, then poshed directly into the forest, riding through a dense growth that would have greatly lispeded others than the expert and hardy unitree of the region. They struck the road at a point where it would through a beavy timber, rising from almost 1 penetrable thickets. The wagons next appeared, with infantry-men walking on each side of them, and these were followed by the main body of infantry, mother platon of cavairy acting as a rear guard. The undergrowth was so thick in the damp, low spot through which the foraging party was passing, that it had been thought aimest impossible to throw out flankers, and the officer commanding had deemed it the best policy to hasten on to a more open country before pursuers could overtake them. The many anxious glauces tomed toward the dense woods on either side, however, proved that the aspect of the place was anything but pleasing.

The purisanc charfed under (reorge's delay in firing, and were fast losing their self-restraint. the wagons again came to a standatill. The offer who had characterized the partisans as frowardly curs" was on the ground, riddled by huckshot from Angus's fawling piece. The British of course, again began fitting in the woods, and now that the location of their foes was better localized, their aim was surer and two or three of the partisans were bit.

"I clow me, all," cried teorye, and away they went, crashing through the under-growth, towards the wood road, with buileds lying after them.

By this time the British troopers in advance had found the obscure wood road at the point where it intersected the highwar, and a dozen brate fellows spurred into it. They paid dearly however for their tomerity, for, crowded tagether in the narrow passage, they soon revisaled to George has opportunity.

"And they say Kitty Schuyler is quita a belle, isn't she?" said Di, with true feminine curiosity about one of her sex. "And Nancy Thomas bas gone to Philadelphia!"
"All true enough," I rejoined.
We had a pleasant bour's chat before sopper time, when my uncle and Mrs. Lraun and the guest, Mr. Montague, caminto the room. There was something very proposessing about the young man. At least Di seemed to think so. She scarcely noticed me, but for all her imperiousness wave her real attention to Mr. Montague in such a way that, halt annoyed with her, I gave her reni attention to Mr. Montague in sich a way that, half annoyed with her, I cod up to leave an hoor earlier than I need have gone. She was then sitting in one corner of the fireplace, he cheek resting on her hand, the glow casting red shadow, the dress, burnishing her hair, touching softly the white rose in her hand. She was a higher fit for any pointer and Leave and the site of the reason was the second of th softly the white rose in her hand. She was a pictore fit for any painter, and I stood to king at her sadly, lovingly, just as I fit, for a moment before I said good-night. The rest were all busy in the other end of the room looking over a county map Mr. Monlague wanted to she.

"Well, Di, ny dear," I said, leaving on the chimner piece, and looking down at her with a smile, "now that I've come back you don't seem so very glad to see rie."

She lifted her dark eyes with a critical expression in them to my face.

"And you look ever so much older and prettier and gayer," I retorted; "will you go to ride with me to-morrow?"

She cast her eyes down with a faint blush. "I promised to go over to the Heasleys to-morrow with uncle and Mr. Montague," she said, softly. "He may have to leave soon and..."

In the few weeks that followed I saw Divery rurely, as there was much of an engressing character on my mind.
War was imminent with England. Every true-feeling American was roused to excitation and indignation. We buston to hald in at and indignation. We began to belt small meetings. Finally regiments were re ruited; there was a wave of warfare through the land. The sound of drum and ibrough the land. The sound of drain antcannon seemed to be in our ears when we

A second week of comparative quiet had gone by. We were graibally increasing our forces but withdrawing the reconcitre as there seemed less danger abead. Substitutely I received an inhimation from the commender that papers of importunes would be sent me—directions, instructions, etc. I was to send a picked company in disguise across the river and meet the general's messenger at an appointed post at middight, and thus, by dividing the work, disarm suspicion. I well remember the day the news reached me. It was storming wildly. I spent the afternoon with a young heutenant, planning, advising, etc., and it was after some deliberation we decided upon the men to be chosen, while I resolved unveil to be one of the number.
